1941 - 2016

The attack on Pearl Harbor was a surprise military strike conducted by the Imperial Japanese Navy against the United States naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii on the morning of Sunday December 7, 1941. The next day, the United States entered WW II by declaring war on Japan. President Franklin D. Roosevelt proclaimed December 7th "a date which will live in infamy". Throughout the war and after, the cry of "Remember Pearl Harbor" became an inspiration to many Americans. As WW II began for the United States at Pearl Harbor, it ended with Japan signing the articles of surrender on the deck of the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay on September 2, 1945.

HAWAIIAN ELONGATED COIN SET

In 1868, an American businessman, Eugene M. Van Reed, Hawai'i's Consul General in Yokohama, sent a group of 148 Japanese to Hawai'i to work on sugar plantations. This unauthorized recruitment and shipment of laborers, known as the Gannenmono (first year of the Meiji era), marked the beginning of Japanese labor migration overseas. Most of these emigrants were endōpeople, peasants or samurai. Although Van Reed had received departure permission and passports for the emigrants from the Shogunate Government, the new Meiji government, did not recognize the permission, and the Gannenmono were consequently forced to make their voyage illegally without permission. The emigrants set sail on board the ship Savito from Yokohama before dawn on May 17, 1868 and arrived at Honolulu Harbor on June 20. Although the voyage to Honolulu went well, the emigrants faced hardships due to harsh labor conditions in an unfamiliar climate and high prices of commodities after arriving at the plantations. For the next two decades the Meiji government disallowed the departure of emigrants due to the slave-like treatment that the first Japanese migrants received in Hawai'i and Guam. It was not until 1885 that the massive emigration of Japanese to Hawai'i began. In that year, the governments of Japan and Hawai'i concluded the Immigration Convention under which approximately 29,000 Japanese traveled to Hawai'i for the next nine years to work on sugar plantations under three-year contracts. In the meantime, thousands of Japanese departed for Thursday Island, New Caledonia, Australia, Fiji, and other South Pacific destinations for similar contract work. Since the arrival of these pioneers, an intimate relationship has grown up between Hawai'i and Japan. Japanese are the second largest ethnic group in Hawai'i. At their height in 1920, they constituted 43% of Hawai'i's population. They now number about 16.7% of the island's population, or approximately 227,000.

The 75th Anniversary of USS MISSOURI 1944 - 2019

USS Missouri BB-63 also known as "Mighty Mo," is an Iowa-class battleship and was the third ship of the US Navy to be named after the state of Missouri. Missouri was the last battleship commissioned by the United States and is best remembered as the site of the surrender of the Empire of Japan which ended World War II. Missouri was ordered in 1940 and commissioned June 6, 1944. In World War II she fought in the battles of Iwo Jima and Okinawa, and she fought in the Korean War from 1950 to 1953. She was decommissioned in 1955, but reactivated and modernized in 1984 as part of the 600-ship Navy plan, and saw action during Operation Desert Storm in 1991. Missouri received a total of 11 battle stars for service in World War II, Korea, and the Persian Gulf, and was finally decommissioned on 31 March 1992 after serving a total of 16 years of active service. In 1998, she was donated to the USS Missouri Memorial Association and became a museum ship at Pearl Harbor.
